

I oppose any attempt to allow cell phone use on commercial airline flights. It is bad enough I have to sit at an airline gate while waiting for my flight to board and be subjected to listening to people talking loudly on their phones.

If this rule is changed at the very least there should be separate seating separate sections and quiet times imposed during the flights.

As a frequent cross country and international flier the last thing I want is having to listen to someone talk for the duration of a six hour flight.
